FUEL: IGNITING DREAMS, TRANSFORMING LIVES, AND SHAPING THE FUTURE

In a world where countless dreams remain unrealized, FUEL (Friends Union for Energising Lives) steps forward as a beacon of hope. Founded by Ketan Deshpande, an Ashoka Fellow and former Visiting Fellow at Cambridge, and mentored by Santosh Huralikoppi, also a Visiting Fellow at Cambridge, FUEL empowers underserved youth through STEM education, future skills training, and higher education scholarships.

Recognized as a Champion of Change by the Hon'ble Prime Minister, FUEL is now advancing its mission with the recent approval of its application for registration on the Social Stock Exchange and plans to establish five schools under the FUEL Skilltech University. Alongside these initiatives, FUEL Business School offers AICTE-approved undergraduate and postgraduate management programs, equipping students with future-ready skills for an evolving world.

The Journey So Far

FUEL has grown from a grassroots initiative into a nationwide movement. With over $24 million secured in funding from global partners like LTI Mindtree, Standard Chartered GBS, Capgemini, Bajaj Finserv, Yes Bank, Wells Fargo, Fujitsu, and Castrol, FUEL has counselled over 1 million students, equipped 2,93,000 youth with future skills, and provided 2,907 higher education scholarships to deserving students.

Through 78 CSR partnerships, FUEL has brought programs like career counselling, scholarships, and entrepreneurship training to underserved communities. The AICTE-approved undergraduate and postgraduate management programs, offered under the FUEL Business School, further FUEL's mission of nurturing leaders and innovators with future-ready skills for an evolving world.

Now, with plans to establish five specialized schools under FUEL Skilltech University—focusing on STEM, entrepreneurship, future skills, sustainability, and management—the organization is poised to impact 20,000 students over the next five years.

A Story of Transformation

The impact of FUEL is reflected in inspiring stories like that of Tejashri Sapkal, a first-generation learner from Baramati. Born into an agricultural family, Tejashri's dreams seemed distant until FUEL stepped in. With guidance and skill training, she secured a job at VFS Global, breaking barriers and charting a new path for her family. Her story is one of many that illustrate FUEL's transformative impact.

Why Your Support Matters

FUEL's initiatives are more than education—they're about creating systemic change. By supporting programs like the FUEL Business School and the establishment of FUEL Skilltech University, you're investing in the leaders and innovators of tomorrow. Naming opportunities for these schools offer a chance to leave a lasting legacy, ensuring future generations access quality education and life-changing opportunities.

Join the Movement

Your partnership with FUEL can create a ripple effect of progress. Together, we can empower millions of young Indians to overcome barriers, achieve their aspirations, and contribute to a brighter future for India.

Let's turn dreams into legacies—one student, one school, one name at a time.
