Travelling Solo

Actress Nimrat Kaur, who was last seen in the thriller, Sajni Shinde Ka Viral Video, talks about all things travel

What kind of a traveller are you?

I get enough of city life in Mumbai, so I love escaping into nature. I am an absolute mountain person. When I travel, I like to go to places that are so far away that it takes an effort to reach. I am someone who likes to plan a holiday rather than be spontaneous. I have a check-list of sorts for where I like to travel—not very touristy and definitely not Instagrammable. Also, I love travelling alone. I connect with myself in a way that doesn't happen when I am travelling with others.

A place that you love going back to?

I go to Mulshi in Maharashtra at least four-five times a year. It's about four hours away from Mumbai and I've been going there regularly for a few years now. It's gorgeous in the rains and in the winters.

What are your absolute travel essentials?

A good pair of shoes and appropriate clothing are a must because I love hiking so much. For a trip to Kumaon, I found these leech-proof trekking pants online which were a lifesaver because there were a lot of leeches everywhere. The other two really important items for me are sun block and protein bars.

What is your favourite Indian destination in the winters?

I enjoy wildlife safaris in this season and being in the thick of the jungle. So, every New Year, I go for a safari. While I don't have favourites among the national parks in India, Jim Corbett is absolutely special.

What is the most adventurous thing you've done during your travels?

I was in Canada for work when I went for a trek with my work assistant who was part of a skiing team. We got to a lake and she dared me to go swimming in my bare essentials. I am not one to back down from a dare, so I had to swim in what felt like sub-zero temperatures.

SARIKA GANGWAL

-with Karishma Upadhyay