"I take all my decisions through the prism of Nation First"

Since NARENDRA MODI occupied the official residence of the prime minister of India at 7 Lok Kalyan Marg, it has undergone an impressive facelift. The colonnaded entrance leads to a long corridor with a maze of meeting rooms. In the prime minister's study, two paintings of peacocks and birds adorn the room. He has a large desk that is bereft of papers, and a computer console on a side table. It was here on December 26, wearing a military green shirt jacket studded with brass-buttons, that he sat down for an interview with India Today's Chairperson and Editor-in-Chief AROON PURIE, Vice Chairperson KALLI PURIE and Group Editorial Director (Publishing) RAJ CHENGAPPA. In an hour-long interaction, the PM spoke passionately on a range of key domestic and international issues apart from discussing in depth his unique management style. He also gave written answers to questions sent earlier. The interview is an amalgamation of the two—the verbal and the written answers
