BANDEEP SINGH

serving CM has bucked anti-incumbency for two decades.

Meanwhile, another CM who has improved his ratings in the home state is Assam's Himanta Biswa Sarma—68.3 per cent, up from 63.4 per cent. This places him third among the most popular CMs in their home states and on top among those of the BJP.

From a national perspective, when respondents from all states were asked to choose the CM they thought to be the best, only three from the BJP featured in among the top 10—Uttar Pradesh's Yogi Adityanath, Assam's Sarma and Madhya Pradesh's Shivraj Singh Chouhan. Adityanath has continued his dominance with 39.1 per cent respondents rating him as the best among the 30 CMs nationally. Even as less than 50 per cent respondents in his own state expressed satisfaction with his performance, Adityanath has seen a jump of nearly seven percentage points in ratings—from 41.7 per cent to 48.6 per cent—since August 2022. This makes him the only CM who has the support of at least 39 per cent respondents both nationally and in the home state.

A distant second is Kejriwal, whose national approval ratings have slumped from 22.3 per cent last August to 16 per cent. The AAP's disappointing performance in the Gujarat election seems to have played a role in this dip. Another CM who has seen a dip in national popularity is West Bengal's Mamata Banerjee, who has secured the third spot with 7.3 per cent respondents rating her as the best, down from 8.8 per cent. However, when it comes to popularity within the home state, the TMC chief doesn't even figure among the top 10 CMs. ■
