▼ CHANDRA SEKHAR PEMMASANI, 48

| TDP | Guntur, Andhra Pradesh

With Rs 5,705 crore in declared assets, Pemmasani was the wealthiest contestant this Lok Sabha election. Son of a hotelier, he studied at Osmania Medical College, Hyderabad, before going to Pennsylvania for his MD. The medico-turned-politician has now returned from the US to look after the interests of Guntur. Incidentally, Pemmasani is also the founder-CEO of UWorld, an online platform that helps students prepare for competitive exams, which he had launched at the tender age of 25.

HINDUSTAN TIMES

▲ RAVINDRA DATTARAM WAIKAR, 65

| SHIV SENA | Mumbai North West, Maharashtra

A close aide of Uddhav Thackeray who rose through the ranks of the undivided Shiv Sena, Waikar switched loyalties to Chief Minister Eknath Shinde just ahead of the Lok Sabha election. But the former state minister with stakes in the hospitality sector—the plush Matoshree Club in Mumbai among them—had a candid admission to make. Having been in the ED's crosshairs, Waikar, who has declared assets worth Rs 54.5 crore, alleged he was given two options—switch sides or go to jail. He opted for the first and went on to defeat Shiv Sena (UBT)'s Amol Kirtikar—touted to be the stronger candidate—by just 48 votes.

▲ SURESH GOPINATH MHATRE, 54

| NCP (SP) | Bhiwandi, Maharashtra

With assets of over Rs 107 crore, Mhatre is now in the Lok Sabha after defeating the BJP's Kapil Patil, a Union minister of state in Modi 2.0.

Balya Mama, as the construction magnate is popularly known, is a serial defector whose political journey began as a Shiv Sainik in the mid-1990s. Belonging to the Aagri community, which has a strong presence in the region, he made an unsuccessful bid for the Bhiwandi seat as a Maharashtra Navnirman Sena (MNS) candidate in 2014. Later, returning to the Shiv Sena, he was elected to the Thane zilla parishad. He then joined the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) and, after the split, sided with patriarch Sharad Pawar.

▶ ARUN NEHRU, 40

| DMK | Perambalur, Tamil Nadu

Son of DMK strongman and state cabinet minister K.N. Nehru, Arun has investments in real estate and the rice business and has declared assets of Rs 81.6 crore. He also has an MS degree in civil engineering from Bradley University, Illinois, and has announced that creating more jobs for Perambalur will be his top priority.

