THE CHANGING BUYING BEHAVIOUR

BEYOND BASICS

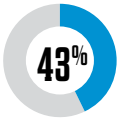

Quick commerce is gradually taking over monthly grocery needs

Full month's grocery needs

Top-up purchases (refilling staples, dairy products)

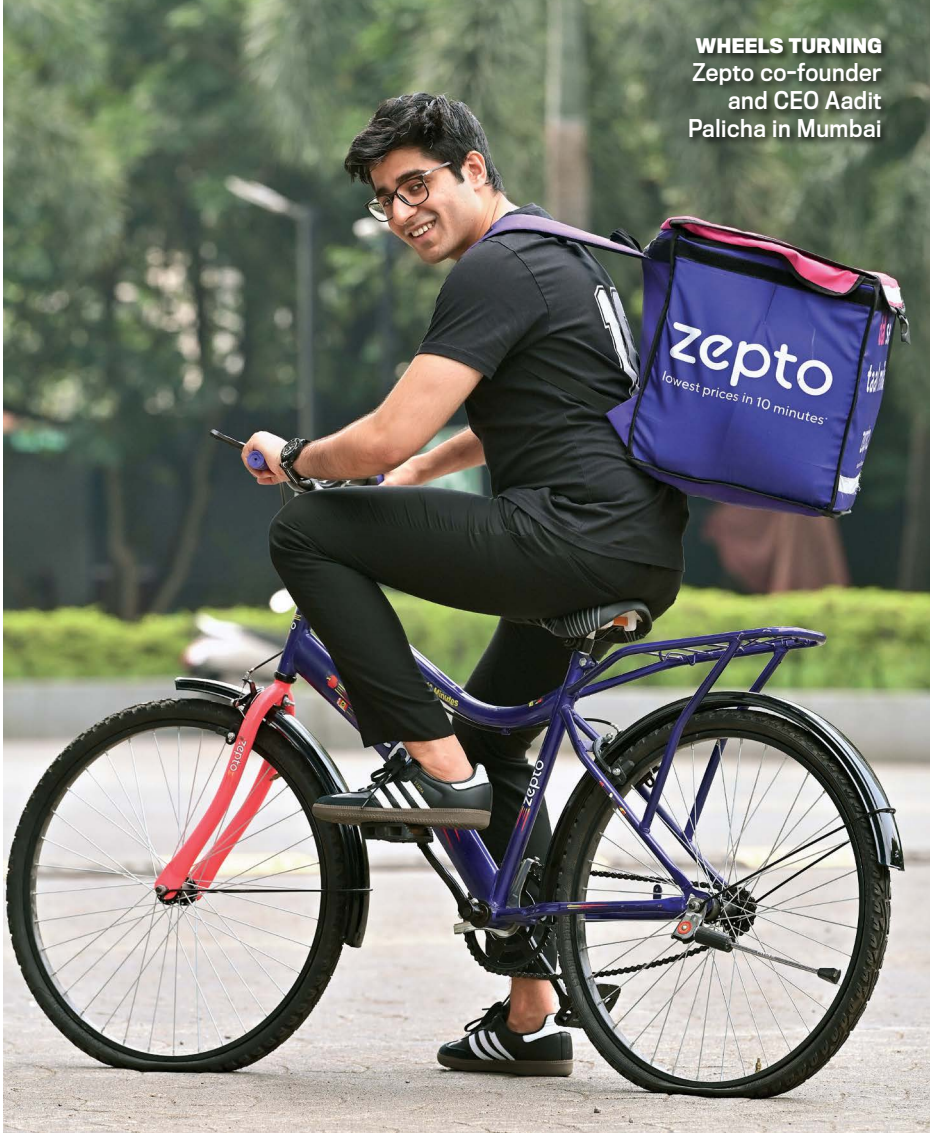

Unplanned purchases (late-night cravings, during sales, and festivals)

TOP 10 CATEGORIES

Clothing	65%
Grocery	61%
Footwear	52%
Beauty and Personal Care	51%
Mobile phones	48%
Electronics	47%
Books	36%
Event/Movie tickets	34%
Homeware and Furniture	33%
Toys	32%

Source: Datum Intelligence Study 2024 (survey of 3,032 online grocery buyers in 10 cities)

Graphic by TANMOY CHAKRABORTY

WHEELS TURNING Zepto co-founder and CEO Aadit Palicha in Mumbai

MANDAR DEODHAR

has 40,000 SKUs for its well-known slotted delivery model, now provides 10,000-25,000 SKUs for q-commerce, of which 70 per cent are groceries and 30 per cent non-food items. "The plan is to shift this ratio to 60:40," says Tirumala. Swiggy Instamart, meanwhile, increased its SKUs from 19,200 in June to 32,000 by September. "To cater to the increasing demand, we have popular brands like Hamleys, Hawkins and Prestige delivering through us. Brands like Lakme too are using quick commerce for their product launches, like the recently introduced Rouge Bloom collection for the festive season," says Amitesh Jha, CEO, Swiggy Instamart.

There's also Swiggy Bolt and Zepto Café, which offer quick meals such as hot and cold beverages, bakery items, breakfast dishes, and even options like biryani, paranthas and rajma chawal. The expansion plans are becoming more ambitious, with a shift towards premium fashion products and larger appliances, which offer higher profit margins. "As customers get accustomed to the platform, they start searching for products on quick commerce first, before turning to Amazon or Flipkart. When you're top of mind, you can sell a lot more," says 22-year-old Aadit Palicha, CEO,

zepto

Parent company Kiranakart

Founded: Apr. '21

Market share#: 15-20%

No. of SKUs*: 25,000

Cities present in: 25+

No. of dark stores: 600+

No. of daily orders .8 mn

Average order value ₹550

#As per UBS by July 2024; *stock-keeping units; source: company

> "We focused on backbreaking execution in a capital-constrained environment and grew to over a billion dollars in topline revenue"
>
> AADIT PALICHA
> Co-founder and CEO, Zepto