

REIMAGINING EDU

The India Today Education Conclave 2024 saw educators debate on making India a global

The key to unlock the many doors of opportunities, education is the most powerful weapon that can teach us to adapt, grow, think critically, and intensively. It's only the ignorant who despise learning. The importance of education, therefore, can't be understated. Debating on the changing landscape of the Indian education sector, the far-reaching reforms enlisted in the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020, and the problems of revamping the entrance examinations, the India Today Group Education Conclave 2024, presented by the Sathyabama Institute of Science and Technology, was an engaging and insightful affair attended by some of the leading lights of the Indian academia. Some of the vital issues that hold the power to change the education sector in times to come were discussed and delved into at length. Right from making graduates employable and giving a qualitative edge to professional courses to curriculum and infrastructure challenges of educational institutions and making our schools future-proof, the conclave covered a wide spectrum of subjects.

The keynote event at the conclave was the session with the Union minister of education, Dharmendra Pradhan, which touched upon the new model for education for 'Viksit Bharat' besides other issues. The minister emphasised the significant increase in budgetary allocations for the education sector since 2014. In a conversation with India Today Group Editorial Director (Publishing)
