THE CREDO OF RATAN TATA

Over the years, INDIA TODAY featured Ratan Tata in multiple cover stories and articles. Here, we share his distinctive take on the burning issues of those times

ON LIBERALISATION

India Today, Dec. 15, 1985

"My fear is that the same people who are asking for liberalisation will scream for protection again. There will be bloodshed because if anyone thinks that it can be done without pain, they are fooling themselves

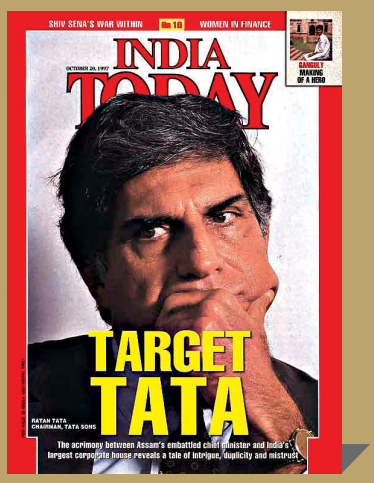

In any shake-up, if you don't allow it to shake out the non-viable, you'll end up with sickness

We have some very dynamic, far-reaching and bold policies being announced and then they're diluted by implementations

You will see a diminishing of the exalted, who depended on whom they're plugged into in Delhi"

ON BEING WRONGLY ACCUSED OF FUNDING ASSAM INSURGENTS

India Today, Oct. 20, 1997

"From everything one hears, many companies have been paying money to extremists. Tata Tea has not. I don't understand why we are being picked upon

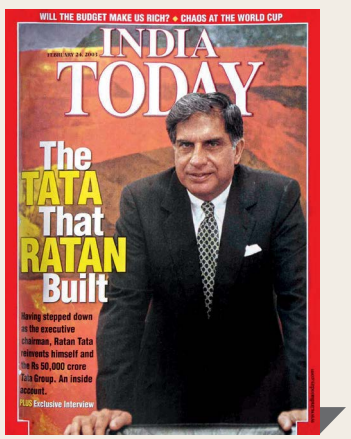

I didn't know providing humanitarian aid through hospitals to persons of Assamese origin, irrespective of their affiliation, was such a serious crime"

ON THE TATA GROUP

India Today, Feb. 24, 2003

"Previously, it was the company first, and then the Group. The strategy was reversed: first the Group, then the company"

"I am a private person and being a politician is just the opposite of that. It wouldn't be an enjoyable life"

ON HIS SUCCESSOR

"One who is a visionary and sees the changing world, not a protectionist"

ON HIS VISION FOR INDIA

"I would like to see India as the powerhouse in the region. If we dispense with some of our self-made boundaries, India can really take its place in the world as an economic power. It hasn't happened because, sadly, we don't look at ourselves as Indians but as Punjabis or Parsis, unlike Americans"
