down to cleaning "the Augean stables", as he put it, coming down heavily on corruption and hard-focusing on development. With a keep-it-simple, no-nonsense, minimum speeches, maximum governance approach, he appointed competent bureaucrats to execute his vision and came down heavily on MLAs indulging in corruption. Shunning communal politics, he parted ways with the BJP in 2009, after the Kandhamal violence perpetrated by Sangh Parivar elements in the wake of Lakshmanananda Saraswati's killing saw more than 39 Christians being killed and over 395 churches set aflame. His stand was vindicated when, in the 2009 assembly election, the BJD won 103 seats on its own—a two-thirds majority—and the BJP was left with only six seats.

Naveen has never looked back since, with the BJD continuing to notch massive majorities on its own in the 2014 and 2019 assembly polls. In this time, Naveen has built an enviable governance record. Poverty, according to official statistics, has come down from 63.8 per cent of the population in 2006 to 11.07 per cent now. The state government estimates that their schemes have pulled out 6.2 million people out of poverty in the past five years alone. Rice production has grown
