CARVING ITS OWN NICHE

Breaking the traditional B-school mould, IIM-Indore champions social impact alongside academic excellence and a unique approach to placements

By Rahul Noronha

As business schools go, the Indian Institute of Management–Indore goes about its business in a rather different way. The institute, as its administrators suggest, has three elements in its mission statement: to be contextually relevant, have world-class academic standards, and produce socially conscious leaders. It is the third element that makes IIM-Indore stand out in the crowd. Students are consciously pushed towards addressing challenges faced by the country and thereby contribute to nation-building.

How is this being done? IIM-Indore has set up a Centre of Excellence called Anveshan with a grant-in-aid of Rs 19.95 crore from the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs to focus on waste management, water and hygiene. Its mandate is to train personnel from all 4,800-odd urban bodies

IIMs are not placement agencies. Our mission is to create, curate and disseminate knowledge that can develop leaders who can solve real-world problems. If you have world-class, contextually relevant skills, and if you have induced responsible and ethical behaviour in you, getting a job is not a challenge
