or his predecessor, Manmohan Singh. While most of those polled (46.6 per cent) feel Modi has managed the economy better, it is 4 percentage points lower than a year ago, when 50.9 per cent said Modi did a better job of managing the economy.

Modi as well as finance minister Nirmala Sitharaman have been vocal about India becoming the world's third-largest economy by 2027. "It is 'Modi's guarantee' that India will become the third-largest global economy in the next five years," the PM said on Independence Day in August last year. The government is also projecting that India will become a $7 trillion economy by 2030. The public seems to be echoing the government's optimism, as captured in the MOTN poll, with as many as 68.6 per cent of the respondents saying that India will be the third-largest economy in the coming years. A good 43.2 per cent also believe that becoming the third largest economy is important since it will help create more jobs, while 32.6 per cent think it will enhance India's global stature. However, only 9.5 per cent think it would increase their earnings.

Q. Is your household income/ salary likely to improve?

CONCERNS OVER INDIVIDUAL STATUS

One clear area of concern is individual economic status. Not many feel that this has improved since Modi took charge as PM. As many as 34.7 per cent of those polled say that their economic status has deteriorated under the current dispensation, while another 28.9 per cent say it has remained the same. Only 32.6 per cent are of the view that their status has improved. The nature of responses to this question has widely fluctuated since January 2016, when those who said
