COMING SOON...

JAWAN
Director: Atlee
Release date: June 2

Remember 'Lungi Dance', an ode to Thalaiva? The closest Shah Rukh came to wooing audiences in the South was with Chennai Express (2013). Jawan, though, is a more direct way of making inroads into that significant territory. Working with popular Tamil filmmaker Atlee and the industry's superstars Nayanthara and Vijay Sethupathi, the action thriller will see SRK shooting guns and doing stunts

DUNKI
Director: Rajkumar Hirani
Release date: December 22

Expectations are sky high from what is the first collaboration between one of Hindi cinema's most revered and successful filmmakers in Hirani and one of its biggest stars in SRK—who was, in fact, the first choice for Munnabhai MBBS. Dunki will also see the fresh pairing of Khan and Taapsee Pannu

"Shah Rukh is not an actor anymore, he is an emotion"

–JOHN ABRAHAM
at the only media event for Pathaan, held in Mumbai in Sharjah. "Whenever I am down, I just need to go out and there is a sea of people. I make sure of this happiness that they give me, I can give it back."

A lot of it has to do with the kind of person Shah Rukh is. The most recent testimony comes from cricketer Cheteshwar Pujara's father Anand Pujara, when he revealed that the actor had insisted that Pujara's hamstring injury in 2009 be treated in South Africa itself, offering to fly the family doc and any number of family members if required.

That magnetic charm that you see on the screen is part of the man himself, not an affectation. He uses it to make people feel special, along with a self-deprecating humour to put them at ease. Writers and directors cite how articulate, sharp and astute he is. They also praise his work ethic—despite being a nocturnal creature, he turns up for shoots at 7 am. There is also tremendous self-confidence: Khan believes he's the best. And he knows