Global Class

DESIGNER KANIKA GOYAL HAS CAPTURED the global fashion zeitgeist with her eponymous label. Now, she's ecstatic about her cleverly named new vertical, Kilogram. Launched this March, it's a mass label that aims to redefine luxury. "We intend to deconstruct the rigid perception of luxury, making it more individualistic and personal (not defined by the set norms)," says the Delhi-based designer. Her vision for Kilogram was to create "an affordable and conscious mid-segment brand", where the pieces are in a price bracket of Rs 2,000 to Rs 11,000.

Just like her designs, Kanika herself is a beautiful blend of contrasts. Born in Chandigarh, she was raised in a conservative family of 17 members. However, she managed to find her own voice when she joined the National Institute of Fashion Technology in Delhi.

After graduating, Kanika went to the prestigious Parsons School of Design in New York. Eager to experiment, she went on to explore opportunities with the best in the industry. Her apprenticeships with Prada, Marchesa, Adidas Group and Bibhu Mohapatra were instrumental in cementing her obsession for quality and detail—leading to the birth of Kanika Goyal Label in 2014.

She has collaborated with brands such as Adidas Originals, Smartwater and Absolut. Her clothes have been worn by global icons such as Saweetie, Halle Bailey, Huda Kattan and Priyanka Chopra, among others.

She peaked in her career in 2022 when she made her New York Fashion Week debut with her Autumn/Winter collection. Since then, she has showcased her designs at the coveted fashion week three more times. "I feel grateful that we get to showcase our craftsmanship to a global audience."

Kanika is known for her eclectic collections that delve into the complexities of thoughts and feelings. "The human brain is one of the most complex and mysterious organs," she explains. "And I'm always intrigued about the workings of the mind. Every season, we tend to tap on a certain emotion and use it metaphorically in the collection." Focus, discipline and consistency are what make her stand out. "I'm deeply passionate about my pursuits," she says. May the Kilogram force be with her. ■
