ADYA SINGH: AN EPITOME OF VERSATILE CHAMPION

Adya Singh's career can de defined as that of a person chasing her dreams. And she has achieved it remarkably well. Flitting across fields that are unrelated, her passion and perseverance to achieve excellence proves that a woman can accomplish anything she can dream of.

Maybe, Adya Singh's upbringing encouraged her to aim high. But it also equipped her with a disciplined approach and a flexibility that allows her to dexterously handle situations and rise on top of it. Hailing from an Air Force family, it was but natural that she aims for the sky, but her family also instilled the remarkable quality of giving her everything to achieve the goal.

Her journey is multidimensional with notable experiences in the world of pageantry, fashion, media and international flying, showcasing a rare combination of creativity and hands-on experience. From a career as an Air Hostess Adya has seamlessly migrated to creative fields, due to her grit, adaptability and resilience.

Occupying a place of pride in her academic achievements is the postgraduate degree in Luxury Marketing from Spain and a master's degree in Luxury Management and Guest Experience from Switzerland. Adya may be a rare combination of beauty and brains, but she has always had an intellectual streak in her. Her flexible, creative, and dynamic personality and a disciplined work ethic helped her to pursue a master's in Psychology from Adler University, Chicago. Her achievements stand out as a harmonious synthesis of creative flair and academic dedication, reflecting a dynamic and accomplished individual.

In her current role at Darwin Platform Group of Industries, Adya is a strategic leader, spearheading brand strategy, marketing, and organization design. As part of the executive leadership team, she integrates departments with the company's values and acts as the organization's coach, aligning and maintaining a consistent company culture.

Adya's global travels and diverse work experiences shape a perspective rich in cultural acuity and an understanding of human motivation. She aims to create shared value through a purpose-driven business. She recognizes the interconnected relationship between business and society and draws inspiration from Michael Porter's principle of shared value, aiming to make a profit while solving society's problems. Her life's passion revolves around making situations and people self-sustaining to form an ecosystem that contributes to making the world a better place.

Adya is inclined towards helping people help themselves by providing tools for a mindset shift for effective functioning and wellness. She believes that many biases and prejudices silently erode the social fabric, functioning at a deep level in the unconscious of society. She advocates for calling them out openly without fear of labels, emphasizing that this is a slow and organic process that will create impactful change.

In addressing social problems through business cases, Adya sees an avenue to promote social justice and positively impact society. Her mission compels her to examine the origins of biases and unjust practices, analyzing the systems that foster them to challenge and bring about system-level changes. She says, " There is a need to treat the root of problems rather than just the symptoms, building the right skills and competencies to advance social justice through courage, perseverance, and responsibility".

Adya's journey is a narrative of transformation, resilience, and an unwavering commitment to personal and professional growth, painting a portrait of an individual poised to impact the world positively.

Guided by a moral compass, her inclination to helping individuals help themselves underscores her vision for a participatory, inclusive system. Collaboration and communication, according to Adya, are powerful mediums to solve problems, emphasizing the need for a collective approach to bring about positive change.

We sure are positive about her. More power to her!