Indian Accent, Mumbai; and (below) Cafe Max, Bengaluru

cultural hotspots. Today, they are also preferred for a memorable dining experience.

Su Casa inside the grounds of Bandra's Bombay Art Society is a great example where classic and contemporary come together. The modish resto-bar whips up unforgettable European fare made with the freshest ingredients.

There's also Indian Accent at the Nita Mukesh Ambani Cultural Centre (NMACC) in Mumbai that pays tribute to the city's Art Deco movement. Ever since it opened in August, the restaurant has been making much noise with its extensive menu featuring some of their signature dishes, apart from more seafood and vegetarian options. The ingredient-forward restaurant also has an impressive cocktail programme to match!

Within the premises of NMACC is another restaurant—Amadeo by Oberoi—that offers elevated service and high-quality cuisines whipped up by Executive Chef Kayzad Sadri and his expert team. Known for its Counter Collection—a unique concept that showcases micro-concepts of Japanese, Chinese, Italian and Indian cuisines—it allows guests to indulge in a culinary concierge service to tailor their dining experience according to their personal preferences.

BENGALURU

Another city where culture meets cuisine is Bengaluru. The city has several cultural institutions that offer the best of both worlds, making it a no-brainer for most to spend their weekends here.

At the top of the list is Cafe Max nestled in the Goethe-Institut/Max Mueller Bhavan in the posh Indira Nagar locality. Head to the topmost floor to enjoy a view of the Bengaluru skyline as you relish European delicacies like spinach roulade and Bavarian meatloaf.

When in Bengaluru, make the most of your time at Jagriti, a cultural hotspot in Whitefield that's fast becoming popular for its stellar lineup of comedy shows and art showcases. Lyfe–Farm to Fork Restaurant and Pizzeria, located on its premises, is a favourite with crowds frequenting it for their sourdough Neapolitan wood fired pizzas and sushi platters. Don't forget to down them with a glass of wine!
