WHAT SETS IT APART

- BITS implements a zero-attendance policy, not forcing students to attend any particular course and allowing them to choose their instructors. This puts the onus on the faculty to attract students to their classes
- Students can tailor their education by selecting minors, enabling them to take up to 50 per cent of their courses from disciplines outside their core field
- Students must complete two paid internships. Additionally, they have the option to undertake

ALUMNISPEAK

"Semiconductors might be the buzzword now, but when I was in BITS in 1970s, it already had a very rigorous focus on emerging industry trends. It provided me with a solid foundation in microprocessors, which led me to start my company eInfochips in 1994"
