"Our USP is the best of educational infrastructure, state-of-the-art auditoriums, highly qualified faculty and respect for diversity that emanates from the motto of our founding fathers. We firmly believe in the liberal arts tradition of discourse and inquiry while staying rooted in our civilisational values"

ANJU SRIVASTAVA
Principal, Hindu College

In an ever-evolving and complex world, the belief that you studied the arts if you didn't have the brains to do science was given a burial a few decades back. For nothing else prepares you better to understand the realm of human life, society and culture than the interdisciplinary approach of Humanities courses.

This is something Hindu College in Delhi University recognises well and has geared its entire pedagogy towards, in its undergraduate programmes. A most sought-after institution for social science subjects, Hindu offers 19 undergraduate courses under its Bachelor of Arts programme. Students not only get to thoroughly study the discipline of their choice by virtue of the well-designed curriculum, the culture of free-flowing academic debates and discussion, industry-academia collaboration and a strong focus on extracurricular activities make their education more well-rounded. Students and teachers have more of a mentor-mentee relationship. Hindu
