At self-funded dog hostel Doggotel in Pune, the intent is to bring dogs and their humans together. Aditya Dhurie, the 34-year-old entrepreneur behind the business, tries to do it in three ways. "First, to have facilities that can enable pet parents to not have to curb outings because of having a pet; second, having a safe and accessible space for pet parents to enjoy with their pet; and third, building better harmony between dogs and humans by guiding local management communities so that they are more equitable and fair in their rules and practices for pets," he says. Doggotel can not only lodge around 30 to 35 dogs for long-term stays but also has a heated pool and activity course for parents who just want to have some fun with their pets.

GOING TO SCHOOL

Time was when a pet's skill sets required no more than to 'fetch', 'sit' or 'beg'. Today's pet parents are more ambitious about their wards' schooling, preferring to send their pets to an environment where the teachers are more humane. Wag to School, started eight years ago by Devanshi Desai, 33, in Mumbai, welcomes celebrity pets among others, whose parents include the likes of Hrithik Roshan, Madhuri Dixit-Nene, Disha Patani and Kriti Sanon. A one-hour training session here is for Rs 2,500, and on offer is 'polite dog training' versus the now-passe aggressive style of pet training. No bribing or dominating the pet to do tricks, Desai works with stimulation and deep bonding between human and dog. "We believe in focusing on the relationship between the parent and the dog , guide the pet on what to expect in the human world rather than using the control and correction methods used traditionally, such as rolled newspapers or choke chains. Each training session is different, depending upon the dog's personality, the needs of the family and the home environment," says Desai. She has also trained families online to help them raise their pets. "If you don't meet a dog's needs, how can you expect them to meet yours?" Wag to School also offers clients other services, such as pet sitters, playmates (who can come home to busy parents and take care of their pet), nutritionists, treks and hikes.
