Q+A

THE BALANCING ACT

Actor-musician Shruti Haasan opens up about collaborating with her father Kamal Haasan and more

Q. How was it paying tribute to your father Kamal Haasan at the audio launch of Indian 2?
I was honoured that the producers of Indian 2 wanted me to pay tribute to dad by performing all his iconic songs. The band and I wanted to put together a fun rock 'n' roll medley of his classics from the '70s up till this film...that captures the spirit of my father's career seamlessly. I always say he is the ultimate rockstar and we wanted it to represent that!

Q. Tell us more about your latest single 'Inimel'. It must feel special that your father has penned it...
The feedback on the song and video has been phenomenal. It's a love song that instils hope yet is rooted in reality. Having my father produce the video was special. I have collaborated with him musically after Unnaipol Oruvan, in a capacity where appa [Kamal Haasan] has penned the lyrics.

Q. What is your upcoming film Dacoit all about?
I can't reveal much about the role in the film since it's too early. But I must admit the minute I heard the script, I knew I had to accept this role. The team is incredible and it's been great working with someone as dynamic and progressive as [co-star] Adivi Sesh and our director Shaneil Deo.

Q. You're someone who juggles the roles of musician and actor. What's closer to your heart?
I can't pick one. These are two different worlds and vibes, and I love switching between them. I started out with music when I was younger, but cinema and filmmaking is what I grew up around, thanks to my parents.
