Since it is a family-centric home, it has an open living-dining-kitchen and pooja area, which ultimately forms the heart of the residence. One of the most beautiful spaces in the house is a double-height open dining area, designed such that rooms on the upper floor overlook it. The dining area is flanked on either side with greenery. The pooja area on the other side is brought to life by a huge skylight.

We wanted to give the home character and visual intrigue, and this was achieved by layering the spaces with elements of history and nostalgia that resonate with the clients. Further, the interiors of the house were done such that it blends with the spaces adapting the less is more concept.

A fine balance between indoor and outdoor spaces, sufficient natural light, and ample greenery are some key highlights of the project. The overall house boasts of an earthy palette, with the warm wooden textures, rustic finishes of terracotta and bricks and greenery.
