FOREVER FIGHTER

Hrithik Roshan is focusing on a slew of new projects after Fighter

GETTY IMAGES

Q+A

Q. Opinion is divided on whether Fighter is a success. Your view?

If you go by trade figures, it crossed Rs 250 crore internationally in a week. If you go by mass opinion, they loved it. If you go by cynics, it opened to empty theatres. As an actor and part of a team that gave the proverbial blood, toil, tears and sweat, I know we have been appreciated. If audiences across the world are making a beeline for theatres, I think that is rewarding.

Q. From hardcore action to selling chocolates, you are doing it all. What is your true calling?

To do my job—whatever it may be. Action is something one can do only while one is physically able to. God has been kind and I am able to pull off action sequences. My real calling is to keep bettering myself and keep fighting against any limitations that may exist in my mind.

Q. What is the one thing you need to improve upon?

The anxiety before work, especially intense scenes. If it's an emotional scene, I like to be left alone to get in the 'zone'. I also request the directors or crew to get the scene in a couple of takes. The more takes there are, the less effortless and natural it looks.

Q. What projects are you looking forward to this year?

We are going to begin War 2 by the end of February. I am excited to be working with Jr NTR on that one. Krrish 4 is almost done on paper and will take up my uninterrupted focus. Once these are done, I want to explore comedy, something situational. Perhaps it will help me relax too!

–with Aarti Kapur Singh